

ABSTRACT

A shelf device for displaying miscellaneous items partitioned in an organized manner. The device comprising
5 a board of a predetermined material having a top surface, bottom surface, a rear end, a front edge, rear edge, and a pair of side edges. A ridge extending upward from along the front edge of the board. A predetermined number of 10 dividers slideably placed on the top surface of the board to move laterally in a side to side manner. Each divider having a front hook member formed on the front end hooking onto the ridge and a rear hook member formed on the rear end of each divider hooking onto the rear end of the board.